Writing.

It is common knowledge that exams make students very stressed, because they have to learn a lot of stuff. Now, I want to tell you about ^{one} ~~some~~ strange method of remembering the main information from the texts, paragraphs and etc.

In the past, I also didn't understand how am I supposed to remember everything that we learn at school. It seemed as if there was too much of information to remember. I decided to ask my cousin if she knows any methods for studies studying, and she told me about a very easy and short method: "Try to make a shorter notes. For example, you need to write about king Henry. Instead of writing the whole name, you can draw a little crowne and the letter "H" next to it". Firstly I thought that this method is too unserious and childish, but decided to try it out anyway. And what do you think? It worked! Writing very short but easy notes can really help you in your studies, because you start to associate some things and pictures with information you need.

In addition, I would advise to use this method for such subjects as history and literature. It is obvious that you ~~won't~~ will not be able to remember math formulas by drawing pictures, so it is going to be more useful for subjects where you work with long texts.

Hope that I was able to help you ~~it~~ with your exams preparation.
Good luck!
