IV. Writing. E)

Hello everyone! Today we are going to talk about students and strange habits they have before exams.

So, what can you tell about it? Did you just remember that one friend, who rechecks and repeats notes like crazy? Or classmate, which can't sleep because of anxiety and stress? But we can definitely say that there's nothing funny or wrong in it; instead, we need to understand the level of fear and try to calm down before exams.

Now, I want to tell you about my friend that has a little bit strange habit before finals week: she writes and draw all her notes on everything. Starting from hand, ending with walls in bathroom. Yes, everyone can find this habit silly or maybe even scary, but she is an A⁺ student, so that's pretty normal for her.

'What about advantages of this habit?' you may ask.

I'll just write her own words here. 'Of course it's helpful and useful. How can you not remember the information you see everyday while brushing teeth? If our brain repeats and reread something in certain period of time, that information sticks forever in your mind' she says. 'And it really helps me. But I need at least one week to remember it. That notes should be in front of me for two weeks, ideally. And as you can see, I write everything on exam paper'

As you can see, it works. You can use this habit if you're upset-minded, like me or her.

But if you (can) ask me for advice, I would tell you to sleep properly. Your brain needs rest. If you don't give him this rest, it won't work as hard as you want.

That was everything for today. Thank you for reading our magazine! And remember to sleep well.
