IV. Writing.

C). Writing a story about school trip.

Hi! My name's Reg, I'm in 10th grade and I had never expected the school trip to end like this.

Two weeks ago we and my class mates, my teacher, decided to go for a school trip to the museum. To be honest I don't like those places such as museums, but sadly I needed to go.

At the day "X" we were standing at the bus stop, waiting for our bus. As it came ^{to} ~~in~~ our bus stop, we sat in inside. I decided to listen to music. Sadly, my boyfriend weren't around me, and I was quite bored. To be honest, I thought that this school trip ~~would~~ ^{will} be the worst. In first 20 minutes I was listening to music. then I thought - "It's so boring out there. And we need to ride 2 more hours!". I needed to find an exit, and it was my phone. I had no internet, but had offline games, such as Block Blast and Candy Crush.

Everything was cool until Misa sat next to me. Misa is not evil, she's good, naive, kind, but she doesn't know about personal space. She doesn't even care if you don't like her stories about her and her "bad boyfriend". She doesn't care if you don't like her sitting next to you. She's just... Silly.

This time wasn't different: Misa sat next to me in the bus. She started yapping that "wow, my bf cheated on me again!". I tried to be polite and kind. But she doesn't care. Then I suddenly pissed off and told her to stop yapping! She looked at me with those innocent eyes and asked me, "But hey! What did I do? I thought we were friends!". I rolled my eyes and said: "We never were, Misa. I don't want to hear about your stupid boyfriend!" And then she left, starting crying. Now, from that day, I feel really bad about how I have treated her. I feel like I should go and say sorry to Misa, but I'm not sure. Should I do that?

I had never expected school trip to end like this: Misa is sad, I'm nervous, don't knowing what to do.

I guess I should talk to her tomorrow. I should go, and say sorry.
