In this article I would like to write about the most useful skill a teenager could have, and how does my experience prove that it is being fluent in foreign languages.

The world is getting more difficult with each day. Many people face the struggle connected to the lack of work places. In this situation, it is clear that the future is unknown, and no one can guarantee that it will be bright. To secure their (post-) positions, many teenagers are already preparing for their adulthood.

In my opinion, the best thing that teenagers could do for their future is get fluent in foreign languages. For instance, English and Spanish. These languages are spoken on worldwide. Thus it gives the person that speaks these languages a way to connect with a big part of the world. Fluency in foreign languages gives the opportunity to apply into universities abroad to the people that know it. And these universities are known for being great in education matters. For example, the people that finished universities like Brown or Duke do not have problems with finding a job.

I can prove this with my own experience. After the research I have done, I can be certain that knowing English gives a big chance of getting into universities of Europe. Besides that, during my studies I have found that (many) most of the sources in the internet are foreign, just like most of the educational videos. Due to that, I can be sure in the aspect of fluency in English.

(After) With everything said, I would like to make a conclusion. One of the most useful skills ~~for~~ teenagers could have is fluency in foreign languages. It gives the opportunity to apply into ~~the~~ universities abroad, and makes communication easier. This article was written for senior scholars, and I hope that it had left a positive impact.
